

Nearby Counties Join In Boosting Movement That Will Help D. C.

Every town and district in Arlington county is going to pull together in a "booster" movement which will cause Washington to sit up and take notice of its neighbors across the Potomac, if the enthusiasm that swept over a mass meeting of business men last night in the county courthouse is any indication of their determination to organize into a permanent Chamber of Commerce.

Defeated in a last hour attempt to elect officers by a bewildering set of by-laws that baffled interpretation, plans, nevertheless, were launched to bring together at least 800 of the most influential citizens at another meeting, July 15, at which the permanent organization of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce will be perfected.

Urging the closest kind of co-operation in community advancement, renewed impetus was given the movement by Arthur E. Seymour, secretary of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, who pledged the support of Washington and Alexandria business men in efforts to build up a greater Arlington county.

FAVOR D. C. SUFFRAGE.
One of the first undertakings of the new Chamber of Commerce will be to unite with Washington business men in the fight for District of Columbia suffrage. That the Virginia business men are strongly in sympathy with the voteless people of the District was evidenced when Walter K. Handy, of Barcroft, temporary chairman of the organization, declared that every community in Arlington county would unite to help win suffrage for their neighbors in Washington.

"I am only sorry that there are still people in the United States who are denied the right to vote," he told Mr. Seymour, in thanking him for his assistance in helping to organize the county.

Forty-eight persons made application for membership in the new Chamber of Commerce last night, bringing the total membership up to about seventy-five. Encouraged by the interest that is being shown in the movement, every member was appointed a committee of one to comb the county for additional members.

Mr. Seymour declared that Arlington county furnishes a fertile field for development and that he wanted to see about 500 and 600 men and women take into the organization at its next meeting.

Noticing a lone woman in the gathering, Mr. Seymour declared that he regarded her presence as a most encouraging factor in the building up of a successful organization.

BELIEVES WOMEN WILL HELP.
"I am an enthusiast about women in chambers of commerce," he said. "In Washington we have a woman on our board of directors, and those who, from this time on, are to take more and more part with men in the conduct of public affairs should be welcomed into your chamber of commerce."

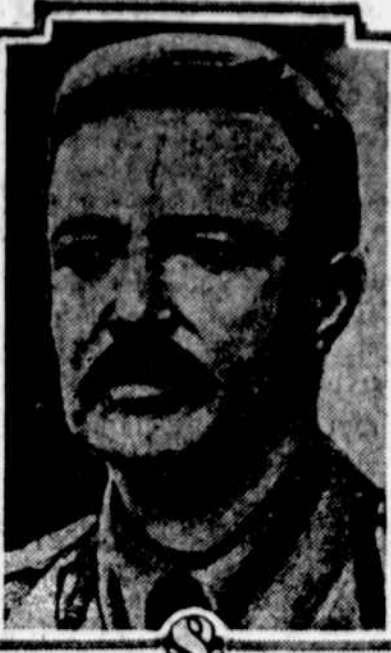

Only by united effort can the citizens of any community in Arlington county obtain the improvements they demand from the State government, Mr. Seymour declared.

"Every encouragement should be given your citizen associations throughout the county," he said, "but you can accomplish a great deal more by working together in a central organization toward a common end. We have a multitude of citizens' associations in Washington, but if there is anything big that we want, it is the strong central body that goes after it and gets it."

Every person who wants to engage in business and civic advancement should be enrolled in the chamber of commerce, Mr. Seymour declared.

"There is no man today who is a true American, making his living by of the British army, who was severely censured in the findings of the commission appointed by the British government to investigate the causes of unrest in India and the attending disorders.

honest pursuits, who does not hold a civic obligation and a civic duty to the community in which he lives. Only as we feel that we owe more and more to our neighbors and our country do we become useful citizens. "In these days of unrest, when no one seems to know what is going to happen next, we ought to stop and look back on the path we have trod and get back to old America, so we will be imbued with more incentive to do something really worth while for our country and the communities in which we live."

WASHINGTON WILL HELP.
Washington is particularly interested in the movement to put Alexandria county on the map, Mr. Seymour asserted.

"We want you as neighbors and friends," he said. "Build up an organization here and you can depend on the co-operation and support of the Washington Chamber of Commerce and also of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce."

Reading of the constitution and by-laws precipitated a flood of oratory that resulted in a three-hour agreement to disagree with the manner in which the officers of the permanent organization were to be elected. Mr. Handy was nominated for permanent president, but the report of the nominating committee got no further than a heated discussion.

Objection was raised to the dictatorial powers vested in the board of directors by Mark P. Ball of Clarendon, commonwealth attorney, who warned that the chamber "would find itself in the position of the District of Columbia school board when President Van Schaick declared that the public be damned." Reservations "safe-guarding" the rights of the members were tacked onto the constitution after a discussion that lasted more than a hour.

Appeals by Mr. Seymour and Mr. Handy to go ahead with the perfection of a permanent organization and to "patch up" the by-laws at another meeting met with strong objections from a score of members. After amending the by-laws so that the board of directors should consist of eight members, representing every district of the county, the "militant" faction, by a tie vote, frustrated an attempt to go ahead with the election of officers.

Hope of reaching an agreement on the by-laws having been abandoned, C. R. Taylor, of Clarendon, secured the adoption of a motion that sent the entire constitution back to the committee.

MEET AGAIN JULY 15.
While regret was expressed that permanent organization could not be accomplished then, a call was issued for another meeting to be held on the evening of July 15, when it is hoped all differences will be ironed out.

Applications for membership were received from the following: Carlisle Weaver of Washington district; F. W. Morton, of Clarendon; C. N. Taylor, Clarendon; W. H. Whipp, Clarendon; Charles M. Bonfield, Clarendon; E. C. Hall, Clarendon; Harry H. Thomas, Veitch Summit; H. T. Clark, local manager of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., Alexandria; Frank P. Ball, Clarendon; Thomas G. Crack, Ballston; Dr. Richard N. Sutton, Clarendon; Ralph A. Quick, Clarendon; John R. Pendleton, Clarendon; A. C. Hector, Clarendon; L. Galland Kendrick, Ballston; W. E. Weaver, editor of the Monitor; Rosslyn; W. P. Aimes, Rosslyn; Sam F. Cooper, Cherrydale; E. W. Jordan, Clarendon; G. C. Wren, Clarendon; J. H. F. Held, Clarendon; C. H. Greathous, Rosslyn; George A.
